MTV is bringing back legendary Celebrity Cribs for 2019

Is there absolutely anything better than having a good old snoop around someone's house?

Well, the news that MTV are bringing back Cribs has come as music to our ears.

The legendary show took viewers around the mansions of the rich and famous including the likes of Mariah Carey, 50 Cent, Naomi Campbell and Richard Branson.

They will start by looking around some of the Geordie Shore crew's houses - and that will be available from 25 February on YouTube and will be called Geordie Cribs. Pretty self-explanatory.

The proper episodes will be 30 minutes long, there will be eight of them and filming will start in Spring.

So, Hollywood better get Mrs Hinchin' their cushions pronto.

Speaking to the Hollywood Reporter, vice president of MTV UK, Kelly Bradshaw, said: "With its firmly cemented status as a cult hit programme, Cribs remains one of the most-loved shows in MTV history."

"The new series is set to be warm and funny, giving MTV audiences a sneak peak into how their favourite stars live."

Cribs was first aired in September 2000 and arguably the most popular guest was Mariah Carey who let the crew film her prancing around her New York Penthouse.

She even stopped at one stage to run and then bathe in her bath.

By 2005 Cribs had featured over 185 homes belonging to musicians, actors, athletes and everything in between. The US show ran for 17 seasons with 130 episodes.

We're feeling nostalgic and they better not mess this up.

Post Malone could potentially be the next Fortnite concert superstar

Fortnite is facing some stiff competition from rival game Apex Legends of late, but what's made the game as successful as it is today is Epic Games' ability to follow trends.

After the success of Marshmello's concert, here's why Post Malone might be next to grace the game with his music.

Whether you were a doubter or a believer in what they had planned with Marshmello, there's no getting away from the fact that it was an enormous success for both the games developer and the EDM DJ.

Fortnite broke the record for concurrent players, with over 10 million people flocking to the in-game event, but they now have a chance to take that a step further.

Epic Games has been innovating ever since they released their battle royale title in September 2017 - allowing players from PC, PlayStation 4, Xbox One, Nintendo Switch and mobile to play against each other for free

Something like this had never been staged before and, considering the concurrent players and the buzz around the Marshmello cosmetics, there's no doubt that this should not be a one-time thing.

A recent post to the Fortnite BR subreddit showed a fan recreating Post Malone's 'Sunflower' music video in the game.

The creation of the video took over a month of work and has proved very popular with the online community.

Much of the camera work was shot in Titled Towers - a potential future venue for a concert - and the response to the video showed that the community clearly has an interest in his work.

So, could the community of gamers and their clear interest in Post be enough to see him performing live? It looks like only time will tell!

Ariana Grande fans have decided to boycott her single "7 Rings"

This song has obviously come with a ton of drama thanks to plagiarism claims from Princess Nokia and Soulja Boy, but that's not why fans are boycotting.

Turns out they just really want her third single "break up with your girlfriend, i'm bored" to take the #1 spot on music charts, like "thank u, next" and "7 rings" before it.

Fair enough, but Ariana's fans have straight up created a #BOYCOTT7RINGS hashtag and are even hoping that Ariana will join them in their mission.

Her thoughts? To call everyone "insane and funny" and say, "i ain't goin nowhere."

Ariana tweeted: "y'all are so insane and funny and i love u. nothings funnier than 'boycott seven rings'..... i can't lmao. whatever's meant to be will be, babies"

So, it looks like you're either with Ariana, or against her. And to be with her, you sort of need to be against her? It's complicated clearly.

Starbucks have created a drink order for every zodiac sign

We all know that coffee is life.

If we could take a page from Lorelai Gilmore's book, we, too, might want to hook ourselves up to a coffee IV. Unfortunately, Starbucks doesn't provide such a thing (yet).

Given the slew of coffee beverages the java giant does brew, though, you'd think it would be easy to choose your favorite cup of joe - but that's not always the case (especially first thing in the morning).

Thankfully, Starbucks has taken the guesswork out for us and provided a drink order for every zodiac sign.

Yes, they've combined the cosmos and coffee together, and, frankly, it's genius.

The company published "The Starbucks Zodiac" on Instagram earlier this week, and the predictions are pretty spot-on.

We obviously think this is awesome, because now one less decision has to be made in the morning.

So what do Starbucks and the stars have in store for you? Take a peek at these cosmic choices and don't be surprised if you catch yourself nodding and saying, "Yes, that's totally me!"

Aquarius (Starbucks Blonde Latte), Capricorn (Cold Brew), Sagittarius (Mango Dragonfruit Starbucks Refresher), Scorpio (Espresso Shot), Libra (Flat White with Signature Espresso), Virgo (Iced Caramel Macchiato), Leo (Iced Passion Mango Tea), Cancer (Honey Citrus Mint Tea), Gemini (Americano), Taurus (Iced Matcha Green Tea Latte), Aries (Strawberry Coconut Drink), Pisces (Java Chip Frappuccino)

There you have it millennial friends. Your coffee choices just got easier. We are truly cosmically #blessed.

Miley Cyrus tweets hilariously NSFW Valentine's greeting to husband

Miley Cyrus is getting in the Valentine's Day spirit.

The "Nothing Breaks Like a Heart" singer sent a NSFW message to her husband, Liam Hemsworth, in celebration of the holiday.

After finding a meme of herself from her 2014 Bangerz Tour, Cyrus took to social media to repost the image.

The meme shows Cyrus lying on a car with her legs up in the air, along with the message, "When it's Valentine's Day and bae says hi."

"@LiamHemsworth love you" Cyrus wrote along with the image.

This is the first Valentine's Day that Cyrus and Hemsworth will be celebrating as a married couple.

Back in December, the duo tied the knot in a surprise ceremony in front of close friends and family in Tennessee.

Earlier this week, Cyrus stepped out to attend the premiere of Hemsworth's new movie, Isn't It Romantic.

The actor was unable to make it to the premiere due to health reasons, so Cyrus showed up to represent for her man.

Steve Aoki has now said he wants Adele or Sam Smith collaboration

Steve has revealed he would love to team up with Britain's finest powerhouses, Adele and Sam Smith, on a track.

The EDM legend has revealed the 'Hello' hitmaker and the 'Dancing with a Stranger' singer are at the top of his list of dream collaborations.

He told The Sun newspaper's Bizarre column: "My dream collaborator would be Adele or Sam Smith."

Adele, 30, has been on hiatus since 2017 after announcing she was unlikely to tour again after her world tour. At the time, she said: "Touring isn't something I'm good at ... applause makes me feel a bit vulnerable."

But in June 2018, it was reported that the 'Chasing Pavements' singer was working on a fourth studio album, which could be released later this year, and would act as her first new music since 2015's '25' LP.

Whilst Sam recently teamed up with Fifth Harmony's Normani on their recent hit and has previously collaborated with dance group Disclosure twice on 2013's 'Latch' and 2015's 'Omen'.

So there is plenty of potential for Aoki to get in touch with both stars.

Aoki is no stranger to an A-list collaboration either, having worked with the likes of Linkin Park, Diplo and One Direction's Louis Tomlinson on his 2016 debut solo single 'Just Hold On'.

The 41-year-old producer says the him and Louis haven't been able to spend time together yet – but regularly communicate over the phone.

He said: "We haven't been able to connect properly due to our crazy schedules. "But when we do connect over text or phone it's always nothing but love and support for each other."

Apple Spring Event could see launch of something TOTALLY new

Apple is gearing up for an event next month, where it is rumoured to be revealing something totally new.

The tech company normally uses its Spring event to unveil its latest iPads and announce updates to various apps and services.

Last year's March event was focused on Apple's educational offerings, with the launch of an app called Schoolwork and a curriculum called Everyone Can Create, designed to help teachers use the iPad to foster creativity in kids.

This year, however, the company is expected to announce the launch of its long-rumoured subscription news service.

Described by some as a "Netflix for news", the Apple News service is said to offer access to popular newspapers and magazines for a fixed monthly fee.

This could include unlimited access to paywalled content from publishers such as The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and The Washington Post.

However, Apple is reportedly requesting a 50% cut of revenue from the service, as well as access to some subscriber data, which has not gone down well with the publishers involved.

The Apple News subscription service is expected to cost $9.99 a month, and could potentially be bundled with the company's existing Apple Music streaming service.

It's not clear yet whether Apple is planning to launch the service globally to start, or which publishers will be involved.

Halsey and boyfriend YUNGBLUD have finally performed their new song

Not only did Halsey, YUNGBLUD and Travis Barker drop their latest collaboration "11 Minutes" yesterday, the song made its live debut as well.

At his Sydney show, YUNGBLUD invited Halsey to join him onstage to play the song live for the first time.

After Halsey tweeted that she would be doing a surprise meet and greet, some fans started to speculate that a performance of the song may be coming as well.

The day prior, Halsey additionally tweeted that she had gotten a tattoo in Adelaide, where YUNGBLUD was playing.

"Can't believe there's a new song out RIGHT NOW and I'm about to do a free surprise meet & greet in a country I wasn't even supposed to be in for months" Halsey says in a tweet.

Following Halsey's tweet, many fans had the opportunity to actually meet the duo while experiencing a fun pop-up shop, where fans could get their hands on exclusive "11 Minutes" merch.

However, despite the song's exciting debut, many people were not too keen on the pair's pop-up and meet and greet setup after confusion over who did and didn't get to meet them.

Luckily though, the surprises didn't end there.

Australian fans continued to have a history-making Valentine's Day when Halsey and YUNGBLUD performed "11 Minutes" live for the first time.

Adam Levine has said worrying about his children is "all-consuming"

Adam Levine had no idea how much he would worry after becoming a father.

The Maroon 5 frontman is father to daughters Dusty Rose, two, and Gio Grace, who turns one this month (Feb19), with wife Behati Prinsloo.

While he has a busy career, and recently fronted the Super Bowl Halftime Show with his bandmates, Adam never stops thinking about his offspring.

"I love everything about it (parenting) but it's a learning curve. It's chaos" he told UK newspaper Daily Mirror.

"It's a shock just how much you worry when you have kids. It's all-consuming - this whole new life you're suddenly responsible for. You realise you couldn't possibly matter less in the equation."

"But I think that's really healthy. If you even want a shot at being a decent parent you have to put yourself so far down the list."

When it comes to their parenting styles, Adam and model Behati have very different approaches.

And as Dusty is already starting to "misbehave", the 39-year-old singer is looking forward to unleashing his inner bad cop.

"I love that stuff" he smiled.

"I'm excited about dishing out discipline. I can't wait. I'm going to be quite strict. I've got to be the bad-cop parent because Behati gets played the whole time."

Prosecco Dip Dabs are now a thing, and they contain real alcohol

There is nothing more nostalgic than a sherbet Dip Dab, but now there is a more grown-up take on the childhood favourite.

Confectionery brand Smith and Sinclair has created prosecco-flavoured Dip Dabs - and they contain real alcohol.

Called the Double Dipper, the sweets come with two prosecco lollipops as well as a raspberry-flavoured sherbet to dip into, making them the perfect treat.

Not only that, there is also a peach bellini gel that contains 10% alcohol to make it a double dipping experience.

Smith and Sinclair suggest licking the lolly and squeezing on a drop of gel, before dipping it into the fruity sherbet for the ultimate taste experience.

Each pack comes with two 'pops, making it perfect for sharing too (although that's definitely optional).

Smith and Sinclair announced on Instagram that the tipsy treats were on sale again last month.

"Back by popular demand! Our Dipper has undergone a major facelift and is now THE DOUBLE DIPPER, made for sharing" shared the confectionery brand.

"You dip, they dip. You both suck. Two Prosecco lollipops, Raspberry Sherbet and Peach Bellini Gel (that's actually 10% alcohol.) Let the double dipping commence."

The Double Dipper is priced at £9 ($11.50) a pop, and you will obviously need to be over 18 to purchase and enjoy.

Smith and Sinclair specialises in putting a boozy twist on our favourite sweets, and the brand also sells alcoholic gummies as well as fizzy cocktail tablets to easily create your favourite drinks without all of the mixing and ingredients.

Selena Gomez rocks Benny Blanco merch and it's got fans speculating

Could we soon be seeing a collaboration between Benny and Selena?

Back in January fans wondered if Selena Gomez had been in the studio with Benny Blanco after the producer commented on one of her Insta pics.

And then nothing happened for a month.

Well, it looks like all the speculation and rumours might not have been for nothing. The fans might have been right after all.

Earlier this week, a stylist tagged the pop star and "Eastside" hitmaker on what appears to be a video shoot.

Selena was also snapped wearing Benny Blanco merchandise with 'Friends Keep Secrets' (the title of Benny Blanco's debut album) on the front.

What does it all mean? We suspect the Revival queen is featured on the producer's next release.

He has released a string of bangers in the wake of "Eastside," but the success of his debut single thwarted their chart prospects.

With that slow-burn hit finally running its course, it would be a pretty good time to unleash another pop radio-conquering bop.

On the other hand, he might have produced the lead single for the quasi-mythological SG2 album from Selena, that we've all been waiting for.

In that case, it just seems a little extra to tag him on the video shoot.

Whatever happens, it will be one hell of a collaboration....

Bruno Mars and Cardi B release their first song together since 'Finesse'

Cardi B returned to Instagram a couple of days ago, confirming that a new collaboration with Bruno Mars will arrive today (Friday 15th).

The acclaimed rapper left the site earlier this week, after telling fans that she was "sick" of the criticism that her Grammy win had sparked.

She said she had "worked her ass off" to record debut album 'Invasion Of Privacy' and deleted her Instagram before returning on Wednesday evening.

Announcing that she was "back from retirement", Cardi confirmed the new collaboration and shared a photo of herself and Bruno Mars.

"Ok so I'm back from retirement to announce I have a brand new song coming out Friday at midnight with @brunomars . #twogrammywinningartist," she wrote.

Responding to the post, one fan wrote: "Welcome back, GRAMMY WINNING ARTIST!!! We love you!!!"

Despite making history as the first ever solo female artist to win the Best Rap album Grammy, Cardi faced backlash from a selection of critics who claimed that she didn't deserve the accolade.

Bruno and Cardi's new release will be their first release together since the hugely successful release of 'Finesse' which came out at the beginning of 2018.

Dua Lipa reportedly in row with boyfriend after Grammys after-party

Dua Lipa had a huge row with her boyfriend at a star-studded Grammys after-party after she reportedly caught him flirting with women.

The 23-year-old scooped the gongs for Best New Artist and Best Dance Recording at the prestigious music awards ceremony, but later her night hit a bum note after she confronted her beau, Isaac Carew.

According to UK newspaper The Sun, the British chef and model was seen flirting with other women at the bash thrown by DJ Diplo.

The One Kiss hitmaker was on cloud nine after her big wins, but ended up shouting in Isaac's face, with the couple having a huge row at the party.

"He told Dua she was overreacting and that he'd done nothing wrong" a source told the outlet. "She was adamant he was flirting with them and gave him the cold shoulder for the rest of the night."

This isn't the first time that Isaac, who has modelled in campaigns for Hermes, Moschino and Reiss, has reportedly flirted with other women while dating Dua.

In June last year (18), The Sun obtained video of the chef dirty dancing with a mystery woman at London's G.A.Y nightclub. Dua, who had been on tour in the U.S. at the time, forgave him and the pair has been working on their relationship.

After the Grammys bust-up, Isaac shared a sweet post on Instagram, gushing about his award-winning girlfriend.

"Prouder than f***ing punch. I told you you'd be walking away with two but you're too humble to admit it. So proud of you! Ps how fit are you in this pic" he wrote alongside a snap of the pair at a pre-Grammy bash, with Dua rocking an electric blue strapless dress.

Lauv and Troye Sivan are super anti-PDA in 'I'm So Tired' music video

If you're one of those people that can't stand PDA, Lauv and Troye Sivan have just the perfect treat for you.

The pair released the video for "I'm So Tired" yesterday morning, and it's a reminder that not everyone loves love.

Lauv and Troye both star in the video, making fly-on-the-wall appearances as couples can't keep their hands off of each other in diner booths and backseats of cars.

As the song's lyrics insinuate, Troye and Lauv have no interest in seeing couples happily together.

The video features Lauv bitterly shoving a straw into some lovebirds' milkshake and Troye sorely sitting atop a car as another duo make out.

The video is a similar portrayal of "I'm So Tired" to what Lauv and Troye brought to Jimmy Kimmel Live! last week.

The two performed among a trio of couples who pack on the PDA.

And those were no fake kisses, either: the singers recruited real couples for both the video and the Kimmel performance.

"They got a lot of make out time" Lauv tells Billboard with a laugh.

Nicki Minaj sent some love to Camila Cabello on Valentine's Day

In a brief tweet, the rapper sent four kissy-face emojis to the "Havana" singer before tagging her Twitter handle.

The shout-out seems to be in response to a fan-made video Cabello posted to Instagram on Tuesday.

In the clip, the singer poses on the Grammys red carpet in her sparkling, Barbie-pink column dress as Minaj's 2018 single "Good Form" plays over the moment.

Whilst Nicki wasn't nominated for any Grammy Awards this year, Camila was nominated for 'Best Pop Solo Performance' as well as 'Best Pop Vocal Album'.

Sadly, she lost out on both.

Lady Gaga beat her to win 'Best Pop Solo Performance' and Ariana Grande beat her to win 'Best Pop Vocal Album'.

Although you didn't win Camila, it looks like Nicki still loves you loads!

Hailey Baldwin's phone background is the nerdiest pic of Justin Bieber

In case you have any doubt about just how obsessed Hailey Baldwin is with Justin Bieber, she straight-up has his FACE as her phone background.

Wow, we have so much in common! (Kidding)

Anyway, Hailey was photographed in New York City this weekend, and she just happened to have her phone facing the paparazzi.

And yeah, someone got this incredible pic...

It looks like what we have here is Justin's school photo, a nerdy-yet-lovable image that should probably be all of our phone lock-screens, tbh!

Drake reportedly has had a custom $400,000 OVO iPhone case made

While mere cretins like us lament the cost of an extremely basic iPhone case, Drake is out here dropping hundreds of thousands of dollars on a custom diamonds-assisted one.

The Grammys' 2019 Best Rap Song winner has apparently placed an order with the high-end jewelry providers at Jason of Beverly Hills for a custom iPhone case worth an estimated $400,000.

The brand's CEO, Jason Arasheben, gave Hypebeast the details yesterday.

"As soon as the new iPhone came out Drake reached out to me wanting to create something epic to add to his collection of jewels," Arasheben said.

The case is comprised of 18k white gold and features more than 80 carats of white and blue diamonds, which personally means nothing to me but is presumably a contributor to the hefty cost.

Word of the case arrives mere hours before the expected streaming debut of Drake's So Far Gone tape, the 10th anniversary of which he marked with a lengthy note to his collaborators and inspirations earlier this week.

"Lil Wayne, a decade ago you took me out of Toronto and gave me the biggest blessing anybody has ever given me" Drake said.

"I will never forget anybody involved in this journey even if you don't fit in this caption."

Drake also notably thanked Kanye West, whose classic 2008 album 808s & Heartbreak is widely considered a sonic precursor to a sound Drake would continue to perfect in the years ahead.
